

DR. JOYCE BROTHERS BIOGRAPHY

DR. JOYCE BROTHERS has been Dean of American Psychologists for over 30 years. Standing barely over five feet, and possessing limitless energy and vitality, Dr. Brothers, who is an NBC Radio Network personality, is also a noted psychologist, columnist, author, business consultant, wife and mother.

Recognition of her significant activities and outstanding influence has come from many quarters. For six years, Dr. Brothers was listed in George Gallup's annual poll of the "most admired women." A United Press International poll named her one of the ten most influential American women, and a survey conducted by the Greenwich College Research Center, listed her among the ten women most admired by college students. Still another poll, conducted by Good Housekeeping Magazine to find "Women in the World Most Admired" by women, ranked Dr. Brothers in a 10th place tie.

With organizational skills that could evoke favorable comment from the most fastidious time and motion expert, Dr. Brothers is able to pursue her other careers simultaneously. She is a regular columnist for Good Housekeeping Magazine, a contributing editor to Parade Magazine, a staff writer for Reader's Digest, and a syndicated daily columnist. Dr. Brothers also broadcasts on NBC Radio Network's Westwood One and her books have been translated into 27 languages.

As a consultant to the business world, Dr. Brothers creates and performs in films and seminars designed for corporate personnel training programs. She is a frequent guest on network television programs including NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show" starring Jay Leno and various panel shows.

For six years, she was a member of the faculties of Hunter College and Columbia University both in New York City, and is now a frequent guest lecturer at universities across the country. Dr. Brothers is a graduate of Cornell University and received her Ph.D. from Columbia University. She was married to the late Dr. Milton Brothers, an internist. She has a daughter, Lisa, and resides in New York City.
