Lil' JJ

Bio

Lil' JJ, star of Nickelodeon's hot new TV show "Just Jordan," is taking the comedy world by storm. Dubbed "The Prince of Comedy," this Little Rock, Arkansas native won BET's "Coming to the Stage" at the early age of fourteen and has been performing ever since to sold out audiences throughout the country. In addition to his live engagements, he has had show stopping performances on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" as well as "Showtime at the Apollo." On the big screen, Lil JJ has starred in such movies as "Beauty Shop" with Queen Latifah and "Yours, Mine and Ours" with Dennis Quaid and Rene Russo.

JJ's introduction to Hollywood had him competing on and winning, "Coming to the Stage," BET's comedy competition game show where he went up against and beat comics more than twice his age to become the show's ultimate winner. JJ was a run-away favorite on "Stage," where the celebrity panel deemed him to be "The Next Superstar of Funny."

Hailing from Little Rock, Ark., Lil' JJ's beginnings are not unlike those of other comedic superstars. A class clown at Mitchell Academy Elementary, JJ was known for keeping his schoolmates in stitches, even as he kept high grades. He modeled his humor and delivery after his idols -- Chris Tucker, Rickey Smiley and Bernie Mac and caught the attention of his physical education teacher who helped get his career started.

Soon enough, JJ was playing local clubs, getting standing ovations at the Atlanta Laffapalooza Comedy Festival and opening for such acts as Steve Harvey, Ricky Smiley and Mike Epps.

JJ can currently be seen starring in the hit Nickelodeon series "Just Jordan" now in it's second season.
